The colleges are still working under this provision, and so effectual has it been, that probably not quite one per cent, of those who complete their training turn aside to any other profession than that of teaching before fulfilling their obligations. A hundred pounds was fixed as the utmost limit beyond which the cost for training a male student for two years was not to go; but, in fact--as is shown by the large balances at the credit of the colleges, which represent the difference between the actual cost and what it would have been at a hundred pounds for each--the cost has always come a very considerable way short of that sum. The question whether the students might not be expected themselves to bear a larger proportion of the cost of their own training deserves to be examined from time to time. Confining the inquiry to the outlay on bursaries to students or Board, as it is called on the balance-sheets, it should be observed that the average cost under this head, on which seventy-five per cent, is allowed by the Department, is very considerably less in Scotland than it is in England. In Scotland, since 1864, each male student's board has been counted as costing 232., and on that sum the Department grant 75 per cent., i.e., 172. 5s.; but what return does the State now receive for that sum? In 1864 the student gave attendance at the training...
